

What stems do you see outside in your neighborhood? Some are incredibly large and tall, others are light green and thinner. Some may be fun colors like red or purple! They may look similar or different, but all stems are wonderful at doing their part. Stems are great at moving water and nutrients from the roots up through the plant to its leaves, flowers, and fruit.

Take note: what stems do you see? How are they different? How are they the same? What do they look like?

Have fun on your adventure!
